Species: Caesalpinia velutina

Caesalpinia velutina is a leguminous tree with very hard, dense wood. It grows very straight and tall very quickly. It is often used for fences and posts, and it aids in soil fertilization.

Tree(s) planted in Project CommuniTree, Nicaragua

A community-based reforestation initiative that regroups small-scale farming families to develop ecosystem services for the voluntary carbon market. Participants reforest and maintain under-utilized portions of their land in exchange for payments for ecosystem services.
